DAILY CONSTITUTION.

THE LOST JEWELS.

Ob, give me back the long gone years,
The years so lost and wasted,
With all the rich and riant sweets
My eager lips once tasted!
Tis not my early youth I crave—
Those fleeting days unreal—
That bright, elims-haunted dream
So fraught with life's ideal!
Tis not the blossom and the bloom
Of flexible lips so glowing;
Of lissom limbs and radiant eyes,
Of lustros tresses flowing!
Not from these my spirit pines;
Oh! not for these I perish;
Oh! not these fleeting fading things,
A weary heart would cherish.
But give me back the star of Hope,
With all its early splendor;
Give back to me the dauntless Faith
An untried soul could render.
Ere life had taught the cheated heart
Its story of deception,
And rent the faithless, fragile veil,
That gilds youth's sweet conception.
Oh, give them back, ye cruel years;
Give back my royal treasure;
Give back the richest, rarest gems,
That blessed life's brightest pleasures!
Alas! they now can never more—
Life's fairest idols shattered—
Not earth can reunite again
The glittering fragments scattered.
Then cease, oh! craving soul, you're
This we is not eternal.
They jewels lost, so blindly bane,
Shall crown thy life superall!
